LOOKING FOR SOMETHING

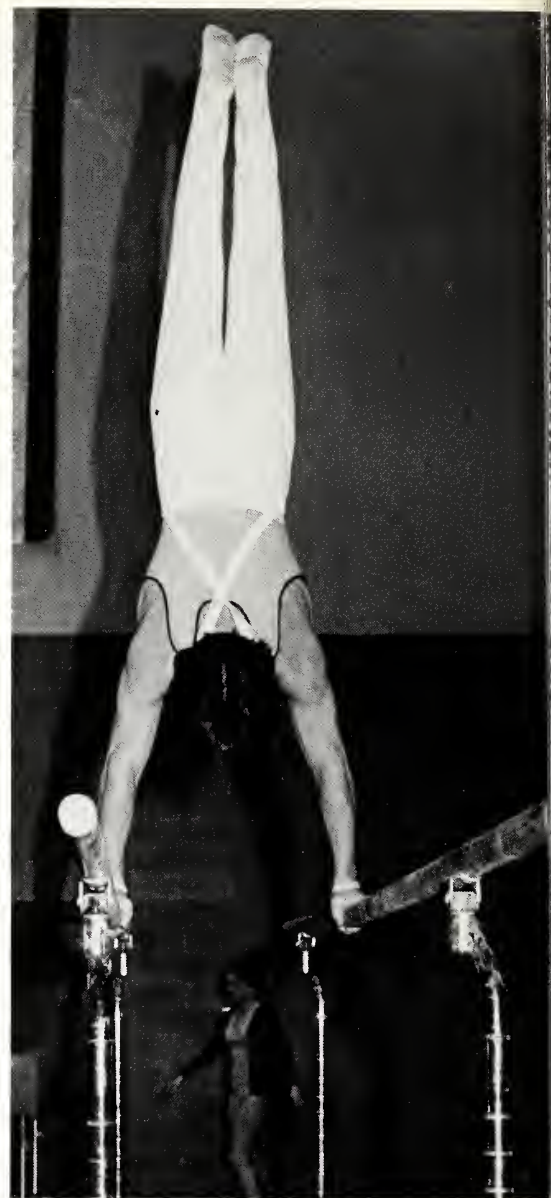

People striving, studying, supporting others—these are the people who want to get somewhere and be somebody. Each person has his own goal to achieve—in academics, sports, music, theatre arts, etc. Everyone wants to be equal to others of different race, sex, and ability. Thanks to court decisions and government actions such as Title IX of the education acts, they now have the opportunity. Some take the challenge of being bused to a school where they are a minority race. Black athletes, once rare at Howe, now star in many sports. Girls are getting into activities formerly dominated by males and finally feeling that they are on an equal level. Physically handicapped students, who could easily attend a special school, follow the lead of Chuck Flowers and accept the challenge of taking a full schedule at a regular public high school. To Matt Langenbacher a challenge meant overcoming dyslexia to wrestle against international competition and become a state championship finalist. Students are as concerned as ever about their acceptance and fighting any discrimination that might hold them back.

Track Methods Improve

Determination, dedication, and talent led the boys track team to a 9-3 season and their first sectional title in years. Lennie Primm won the high jump and seven others took places. Five boys placed in the regional and five in the city meet. The mile relay team was fourth in the city and set a school record of 3:25.9. State finalist Kevin Barringer broke the long-standing 100 yard dash record with a mark of 9.9, Primm jumped 6'5½" in the high jump, and Mark Broner tied the high hurdle record. Broner and Terry Edwards also qualified for the state meet.

The team's recent improvement has been due to new training methods and stronger competition as well as talent. New warm-up exercises have helped prevent injuries. Videotaping has helped the coaches recognize areas where athletes need improvement. Better schedules have provided more opportunities to run on hard-surfaced tracks where times are faster. The athletes have been encouraged to work harder and perform better.

Varsity Baseball Hits Well

Determination and team morale led the 1977 baseball teams through a tough schedule. The varsity team, consisting mainly of underclassmen, played against teams rated in the top ten in the state and four different sectional champions, ending up with a 14-15 record. Their main strength was hitting, with a team average of .247. Bruce Shadiow led the team with an average of .351 and accounted for 34 hits and four home runs. Eddie Davis was outstanding defensively and Glenn Cunningham led the pitching staff.

Undefeated against city teams, the reserves gained the city title for the second time in a row with a 16-5 record. Heading the pitching staff were Robert Foster and Brad Gildea. Bryan Dodd and Chris Pitman led in hitting with averages of .390 and .385. The team worked together well and had a strong defense.

A disappointing freshman season was highlighted by wins over Marshall (13-2) and Scecina. With defense as their main strength, they ended the season with four wins and eight losses.

Golfers Set Win Record

Howe's golf team won sixteen of nineteen matches this year, breaking the standing record of fourteen wins in one season. Coach Joe Vollmer attributed the team's success to its internal balance and overall consistency. One of the most impressive victories was over archrival Marshall, which was led by all-state player John Fisher. Howe defeated a strong Chatard team twice, once in a shortened match (rained out) and again in the following rematch. Award winners included John McClain (Most Improved Player), Joe Smith (Best Mental Attitude), and Joe Kaiser (Most Valuable Player). Every player contributed equally and this balanced effort resulted in one of the most successful golf teams in Howe history.

Desire Brings Title

There was an air of confidence and winning as this year's tennis team showed up for the city meet. The other schools knew Howe would win and the real contest was for second place. The team swept the city championship, taking twice as many points as the second-place competitors. No city team was able to win a single set against Howe in season competition and the season ended with twelve wins and two losses. According to Coach Finkbiner, the team's success was due to "hard work, dedication, and an insane desire to win."

The five seniors on the team grew up playing tennis together. Their friendships and skills made what was normally an individual sport a team effort. No one was injured and all team members were able to compete in the sectional where the team was overcome by stronger county schools. Every team member has won at least one city title as the team continued their winning tradition.

Records Broken, Losing Season

Seniors were the power of the 1977 varsity football team. Howe's eight returning lettermen included co-captains Bruce Shadiow and Joe Ayers and running back Kevin Barringer, the team's leading rusher and scorer. Barringer finished the season first on the team in scoring with a total of 52 points. Ayers was second on the team, scoring 42 points. Shadiow set a new school record by passing 833 yards during the season and led the city with nine touchdown passes. Leading tacklers were Joe Ayers, Tom Barnes and Jessie Finch.

The 3-7 season record did not reveal the hard work and effort put into every game. Two of the three Hornet victories were against Arlington and Marshall, both undefeated before playing Howe. The team played an impressive game against Arlington, rushing for a total of 330 yards. The Hornets defeated Marshall by one point in an exciting overtime game.

A low point in the season came when Howe was forced to forfeit all winning games because of a mix-up on a player's class load. Though minor injuries kept some team members from playing for a short time, there were no serious injuries during the season. The year was different from others in that many more sophomores and juniors played than had in any previous season.

(Melanie McDermet)

Varsity, Reserves Combine Squads

Howe's reserve and varsity football teams were partially combined in the 1977 season for several reasons. One was to give sophomores and juniors who would normally play only on the reserve team a chance to participate in varsity games. Reserve members were also ready to replace injured varsity players. The team consisted of about twenty members, including leading scorer Ken Kincy and leading rusher and pass receiver Brad Gildea. The team had no serious injuries and wound up its season with a winning record of 6-3.

* * * * *

The freshman football team is made up of boys from seven different junior high schools who must get to know each other and learn to play together as a team. The 1977 freshmen had a strong defense from the start of the season and worked to develop better punting and passing techniques. As the team improved, it won four of its last five games and ended the season with an even record of 5-5. A rewarding victory for the freshmen was over undefeated Cathedral, a team that had been contenders for the city title. Outstanding freshman players were quarterbacks Dave Hinesley and Brian Shinkle, split end Eric Byrd, and punter Ted Wadsworth, who kicked a fifty-yard punt in the Cathedral game.

Harriers Improve Record

Cross country is a very individual, competitive sport. Athletes must be in their best shape and form to run, not jog, the two and a half mile course. They not only run against the clock, but give words of encouragement to competitor and teammate alike. It is truly a sport for only the most dedicated athletes.

Howe's runners practiced hard every day before and after school preparing themselves for their thirteen meet season. A highlight of those practices was having freshman coach Bill Gavaghan run with them while training for the 1980 Olympic trials in the marathon run.

Returning lettermen for this year's varsity team were senior captain Jim Clark and juniors Malcolm Curry, Jeff Oberlies, and Tim McPherson. Curry and Oberlies battled for second and third places most of the season with Curry finishing sixteenth in the sectional. Jim Clark placed first in five out of thirteen meets this season. He was ninth in the city meet and ran number one man two years.

Finishing fourth out of sixteen teams in the city and placing tenth of twenty teams in the sectional, the varsity team finished their season with a 9-3 record improving last year's record as coach Tim Jessup had hoped. A strong reserve team highlighted their season with a third in the city meet. The freshman team finished second in the city with promising runner Curtis Childs in second place individually. Coaches Jessup and Gavaghan were pleased with the results of the 1977 cross country season.

Swimmers Dedicated Workers

At the beginning of the season it was doubtful that Howe would even have a boys swim team. The lack of a coach was the biggest problem but the lack of a pool didn't help matters any. Luckily we were given permission to use Tech's new pool and a new coach was found, Mr. Al Wellington, a non-teacher but an ex-intramural swim coach from Ohio University.

"Hard work and dedication were our most outstanding qualities," said team captain Tim McConahay. "We are probably one of the hardest-working teams at Howe because it's more difficult to work hard when you're losing than to breeze through when you're winning."

School records were broken in the 500 freestyle and diving competition by Tim McConahay and Mark Roeschlein respectively. Award winners included Tim McConahay (Most Valuable), Gilbert Pritt (Most Improved), and Jim Doninger and Mark Roeschlein (Most Dedicated). Dean Hvidston was chosen team captain for next year.

For being such a small team and having such large-scale competition, the team performed well. Scores show that they improved dramatically during the course of the season, and with the solid backing of a new coach a growing team looks forward to next year's season.

Cagers Have Off Year

Inexperience, inconsistency, and poor shooting plagued the varsity basketball team throughout the season. The team's lack of experienced guards proved to be a pitfall. Despite the frustrations of a 6-15 season, Rick McKinstry, the only returning letterman, had a twenty-plus point average and was named to the Coaches' All-City team. The Hornets' outrebounding most of their opponents could be attributed to intimidating 6'5" center Brian Edwards, who also became a top scorer at the end of the season. The future looked promising as three of the starting five planned to return for another season with many tall, talented, experienced underclassmen.

With their offensively oriented play, the reserve basketball team got it together and made their way to the finals of the city tournament before losing to a tough Northwest squad. Ron Wills, John Kelley, and Bob Phillips played important roles in the team's 7-15 record. Even though they played well together, the team lacked a strong defense and occasionally were impatient on offense.

Mike McCarty paced the freshman team to a 7-7 mark with his twenty-five point scoring average. Their first victory, over archrival Seecina, marked the end of a two-season losing streak. The team started out strong, but lack of depth hurt in the last half of the season.

Wrestling “A Way Of Life”

“Wrestling isn’t a sport; it’s a way of life.” (Coach Jim Arvin)

“Family unity” brought success as each member understood his part in the whole wrestling family. Each wrestler’s family went to meets and accepted their son’s or brother’s early morning or Saturday practices. Girl friends encouraged their favorite wrestlers, sharing in the result, win or lose. Athletes and coaches, the family members seen by the fans, practiced long and hard, sacrificing activities and giving up favorite foods to “make weight.” The Mat Maids cheered on the wrestlers, attending all the home and many away meets.

Every family member made a contribution to the team’s success as the varsity had an 8-1 record, finished as city champions, and were rated as high as eighth in the state at times. Several individuals played key roles in the team success. Matt Langenbacher was a state finalist for the third year in a row and finished as runner-up. Five wrestlers placed second in the sectional. No matter what the contribution, on or off the mat, everyone was important in the development of a successful wrestling program.

Work Gymnasts' Weapon

Hard work was the weapon used by Howe gymnasts to combat inexperience. Led by returning lettermen Mark Storm and Greg Underwood, the Hornets' progress was slow but a season record of 5-8 served as no indication of their actual performance. The only gymnastic team in the Indianapolis public school system, Howe faced stiff competition from strong schools across the county and state. Statistics proved to be only a tally of points, not a true representation of the performance of the gymnasts.

The boys have worked hard to overcome the novelty of the sport, having had no gymnastic training before high school, and coaches Hewitt and Fitzgerald have strived to polish and refine raw talent.

In the midst of defeat were some victorious Howe gymnasts who frequently placed first in their individual events despite a losing meet. Among the outstanding performers were Mark Storm, Greg Underwood, and Joey Cornett who demonstrated their gymnastic prowess in such events as still rings, high bar, and vault.

Coach Rick Hewitt feels that Howe's young gymnastic team shows great promise for the future with the development of new talents and new techniques.

Girls Discover Golf

What do you get from golf? According to Louise Curtis, you get "The satisfaction of knowing that you and only you can help your game. It's an individual effort, a game that teaches you patience and self-control." Whatever the attraction, there was a girls golf team at Howe this year. Plagued with inexperience but loaded with enthusiasm, the girls practiced during the spring of 1977 at Pleasant Run Golf Course. When the fall finally arrived, the team started the first season of girls golf at Howe. The majority of the girls, having never played golf, began the season with relatively high scores. But that in no way dampened their optimistic spirit.

When asked what satisfaction she derived from the sport, Leslie Cox replied, "That's hard to answer. Some days I was very satisfied and other days I would have liked to throw my clubs in the creek, which wouldn't have been hard since I was in it half the time." It was that sort of sense of humor that carried the girls through their first discouraging matches until they finally won their first match from Decatur. The season ended with a 1-7-0 record and four underclass girls looking forward with enthusiasm to next year's competition.

Girls Track Breaks Records

Talented athletes returning from last year and new members full of potential were the strength of the girls track team. False starts and disqualifications were responsible for early losses, but once problems were worked out the team won five of their last six meets.

In the sectional the medley relay team took second place, Pilar Ammons took third in the 440, and state finalist Sheila Curry took second in the 220. The season ended with a 6-4 record, seventh place in the city meet, and eighth in the sectional. Records were broken in many events.

One of the team's strong points was its size. Howe was one of the few schools in the city with both varsity and reserve teams. Everyone who was willing to work hard and stay on the team had a chance to compete.

Tennis Small in Numbers

Tennis is an individual's sport which requires mental and physical stamina. The girls tennis team was proficient in both areas, finishing 8-6 and placing third in both the sectional and the city tournaments.

Although the team was small in number with only eleven members, their talent compensated for the lack of numbers. Coach Jody Hancock commented, "We hope to have a bigger team next year with fewer matches to allow more practice time."

Since most of the girls did not have previous experience on the court, their skill and achievements were surprising throughout the season. As the most experienced member of the team, Mimi Boulais has been playing tennis since she was ten years old. Mimi, the number one singles player, placed second in the city and third in sectional competition. Freshman Julie Oltean, who gained experience playing indoor tennis, competed in number two singles for the team.

Individual achievements and spirited teamwork highlighted the season. Julie Oberlies led the team in the city tournament by winning the number three singles title. Individual awards were given to Julie Oltean, Tina Eggers, and JoAnne Mitchell, who were voted Most Valuable Player, Best Mental Attitude, and Most Improved Player respectively. The season ended optimistically as only two players graduated.

Years Benefit V-Ball Team

Girls volleyball has been in existence at Howe for four years. Each year the team has improved itself with experience. This year's varsity volleyball team consisted mostly of juniors with Tina Eggers the only senior. Each has played at least two years at Howe and has had previous experience in grade school.

The team met several city and county powers, losing disappointing three-game matches to Roncalli, Lawrence North, Attucks, and Seccina, but defeating Hancock County sectional champion Greenfield-Central. They finished their regular season with a 7-7 record but lost the first round in city and sectional tournaments to strong opponents.

The reserve team, although lacking experience and size, had a fine 5-3 record when injury and jobs forced cancellation of several matches and the team joined the varsity team members.

Swim Season Delayed

Pool problems delayed the start of the girls swim team's fifth season. It was not known until early October whether Howe could use the Forest Manor pool.

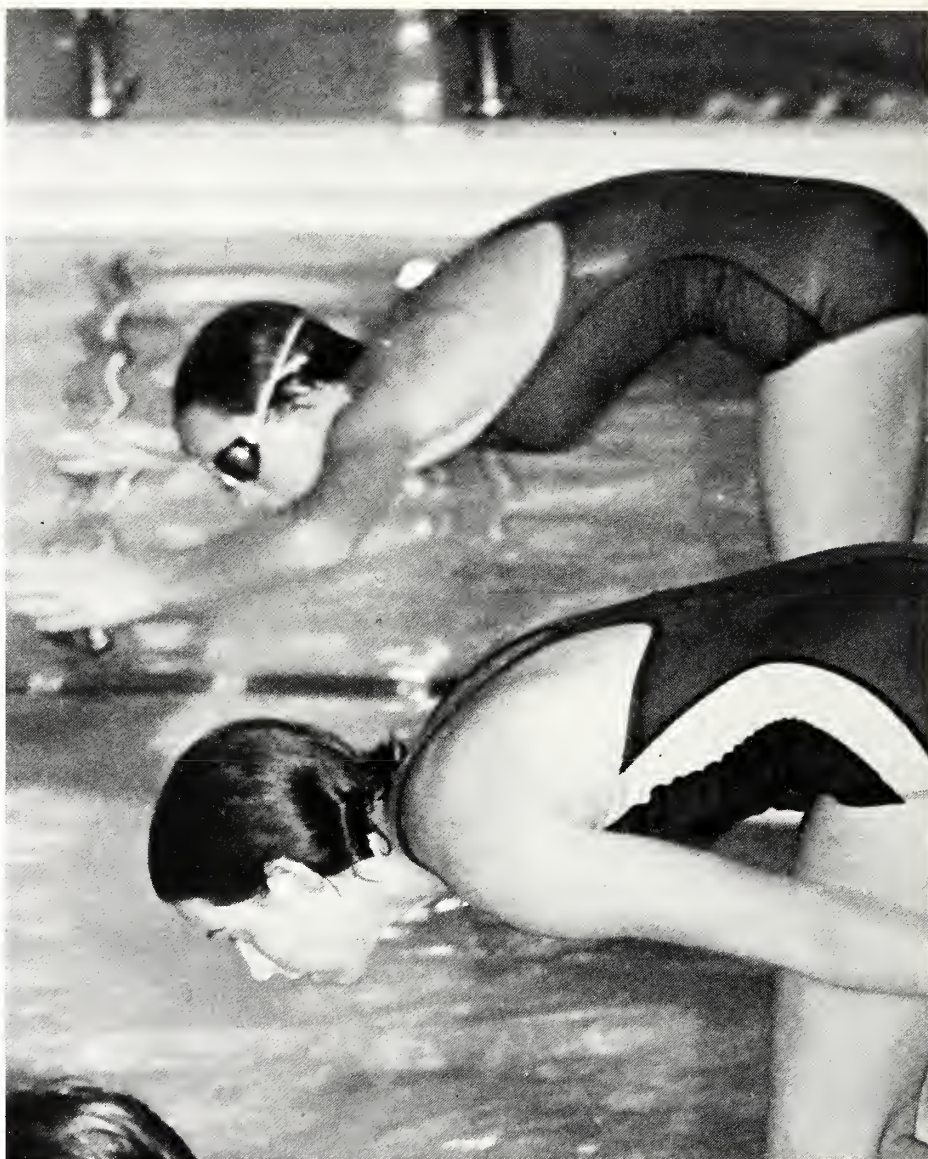

Once the season did get under way, they soon ran into more problems. The team had started out with 18 girls but ended up with only 11. Some girls had jobs and some lost interest after experiencing night practices and transportation problems.

Four-year member Lois Lauck, swimming breaststroke and freestyle, and junior captain Eileen Dugan, swimming backstroke, led the relatively young team. The best performance of their disappointing 0-11 season was at Beech Grove, where most of the girls swam their best times to make it a close meet.

At the close of the season Coach Jody Hancock hoped to get started on time next year and recruit more people to strengthen the team. And as every year their goal was to improve times and beat teams they lost to this year.

Girls B-Ball Winning

Experience, quickness, and good shooting made the girls varsity basketball team sectional runners-up for the second year in a row. They beat defending champs Roncalli in the semi-finals but lost to Beech Grove in the finals. A 60-foot shot by Debbie Johns in the final seconds of the third quarter added excitement to an otherwise disappointing final game.

Four returning letterwomen, with only one senior, led this powerful team to an 11-7 season record. Sophomores Gus Helm and Sheila Robertson led in scoring.

The reserves ended their season with a 9-5 record, a surprising feat for a freshman-dominated team. Freshman Mary Lumsey led in scoring with a remarkable total of 76 points. Coach Rita Gaither felt that the turning point of the season was defeating Attucks after some good holiday practices. The team finished with six straight wins.

Both squads had tough schedules, playing teams with five or more years of experience compared to Howe's three. Varsity coach Bob Mitchell pointed out that the high sectional finishes were a remarkable accomplishment for such a young team. He feels that increased competition in local junior highs will continue to improve Howe's program.

1. Leading scorer Gus Helm lays the ball up over her Perry Meridian opponent.

2. Angie Montgomery goes in to rebound a missed free throw.

4. Debbie Johns shows her ability to set up plays and maneuver without the ball.

Gymnasts Going Strong

Gymnastics, the longest-running girls sport at Howe, is still going strong as the girls proved to be tough competitors. With a new coach, Howe graduate and former state champion Lou Ann Schwenn, and only five returning letter winners, this was expected to be a "rebuilding year." However, the team's strength in uneven parallel bars, floor exercise, and vaulting clearly outweighed inexperience.

As always, meets were scheduled against many state and county powers. Performing against the best of competition, the team had won several dual meets by "Hilltopper" deadline and had produced many outstanding individual performances. Defending state finalist and sectional bars champion Krista Shepard scored high, as did Theresa Littleton. Cheryl Craig, only a sophomore, consistently scored around 9.0 in floor exercise. Cindy Thomas regularly placed high in all-around competition. Despite some inconsistency, the younger girls on the team improved rapidly.

A special highlight for the girls was placing second of eight teams in their own invitational, always one of their biggest challenges.

Although the pressure to continue Howe's winning gymnastics tradition was strong, performances were good throughout the year.

(Tina Allen)

1. Senior standout Krista Shepard shows exacting moves on the uneven parallel bars.

2. Ellen Mackell begins her take-off on the vault.

4. Sophomore Cheryl Craig steadies herself before a front walkover.

5. All-around standout Cindy Thomas scores well in vaulting.

6. Janet Mackell incorporates ballet steps into her beam routine.

Howe Invitational—2nd

(SCORES INCOMPLETE)

Many Howe athletes have come and gone bringing honor to themselves, their school, and their community. Few are given the recognition they deserve. This year marked the graduation of one of a handful of truly great athletes in Howe's forty-year history. This athlete was Matt Langenbacher, whose four-year accomplishments speak for themselves:

Holder of Howe wrestling career win record (102-8-1 in four varsity years)
Winner of sixteen major wrestling tournaments
Three-time state wrestling finalist (State runner-up as a senior)
Two-time city wrestling champion as an individual with two team championships
Twice outstanding wrestler in city tournament by vote of coaches
Three times Howe wrestling MVP
Twice Howe wrestling captain
Four-time Indianapolis-Scarborough Peace Games champion
Undefeated in wrestling dual meets in high school competition
Twice city doubles champion in tennis

You Live The Show

It takes a lot of people in cooperation to produce a Howe musical. The viewers see the result of months of hard work and preparation but only for a few moments at the end of the show are they made aware of the people backstage and those in the pit who do a large percentage of the work.

From the principal's point of view, it's a deeply personal thing. It's your whole life for months before the show. You think the show, you dream the show and you live the show. It has a permanently lasting effect upon those involved.

There is a tremendous amount of satisfaction derived from performing in the musical. It's ten weeks of sheer pain but it's worth it in the end. It's a growing experience that we shall never forget.

Almost everyone involved with the musical feels a certain degree of reward. And it's difficult to fight the lump in one's throat as the curtain descends for the last time. But then someone asks, "What show do you think you're going to do next year, Mr. Lewis?"

That's where it's really at. That's the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. That's the tradition of excellence we've all grown to love and respect.

1. After-school rehearsals were vital for the production of this year's musical, "110 in the Shade." Here we see Lizzie (Ann Hudson) deciding between the flashy, loud Starbuck and the realistic File (Doug Hvidston) in the musical number "Wonderful Music."
2. Special dancers Phil Lane, Dean Hvidston, and John Miser practice hours after school on dance numbers.
3. Starbuck (Steve Spicklemire) tells Noah (Jim Davis), "No, I won't clear out."

Backstage Crews Have Fun

What goes on behind the scenes of a dramatic production at Howe is just as important as what finally appears on the stage. Many dedicated students work hard all year painting drops, checking lighting and applying make-up just right so those special performances will be perfect. Not only do these groups sometimes spend months in advance preparing for a production but they have a good time doing it.

Band Makes Changes

In 1978, the band's many changes were the first steps into a promising future. Its new formations, new marching style, and new music were the result of many behind-the-scenes changes. Changes included a new band director, new instruments, and yard lines on the teachers parking lot for practicing. Enthusiastic freshmen were a big asset as almost forty joined the ranks. For the first time there was a flag corps which was made up of eight members who practiced long hours outside band practice.

Besides its football performances the band marched in the Veterans Day Parade and the 500 Festival Parade. New band uniforms ordered in January appeared for the first time at the 500 parade. The changes characteristic of the Howe band increased pride and brought satisfaction to its members.

Hornet Honeys Excel

The Hornet Honeys began their performing season last May as they prepared for summer competition, practicing many long and hard hours developing close-to-perfect routines. Their efforts were worth all the time spent as they returned home from Indiana State University's Sparkette Summer Camp with runner-up ratings and a trophy as most outstanding corps. This experience helped build morale and enthusiasm for their coming season.

Upon returning from camp they practiced to coordinate the halftime routines with the marching band and its flag corps under the leadership of Mr. Hal Meurer, the new band director. New marching and drill routines served to integrate the three groups into one working unit.

The basketball season brought a lull in activity for the Hornet Honeys as scheduling difficulties and bad weather postponed many home games. Despite the many problems the Hornet Honeys shared a certain pride and satisfaction in their work.

Orchestra Performs Well

Howe's sixty-member orchestra, under the direction of Mr. William Christoff, was very active this year. For the first time they participated in a joint concert with Woodview Junior High School. They also played at the Pops Concert and Christmas program and were a vital part in this year's musical. During the second semester, they made a tour of local grade schools and finished up the year with the spring concert.

The string ensemble, made up of the fifteen best string players, practiced many mornings at 7:30 a.m. They played at the Education Center and the Gift and Hobby Show at Christmastime and did well in the state ensemble contest.

As usual, Howe was well represented in the all-city orchestra.

Music Hooks Many

An interest in music and a chance to be with friends led many freshmen to enroll in music. Many were attracted by opportunities to be part of a performing group and put on a musical. Little did they know they would be hooked by the music department for the rest of high school.

A "handy size" was noted by choir director Tom Lewis as one of the strong points this year. The 80 members of the concert choir gave their first school performance at the annual Pops Concert. Other school performances were the Christmas community sing and the spring concert.

Outside of school the choir sang at the all-city mixed choir festival, where city concert choirs perform for each other and then join to sing some pre-selected songs. Howe's representation of almost 30 people at the all-city choir performance at Clowes Hall topped that of all other participating schools. There was more emphasis on the spring contest this year and students were urged to sing more solos as well as join to sing in ensembles. The choir managed to keep their busy schedule of performances besides spending a large part of the second semester on the musical, "110 in the Shade".

New Groups Formed

Low enrollment in chorus classes resulted in smaller Concert Club groups this year. These groups performed at the Christmas and spring concerts. The Girls Concert Club, traditionally called Choralaires, also performed at the Pops Concert. Despite the declining enrollment two new groups were formed. Trebleaires, directed by Robert Bramblett, consisted of sixteen girls and accompanist Tim Bratton. The Madrigals and Mixed Ensemble were combined on a trial basis with Tom Lewis directing contemporary music and Robert Bramblett taking over at Christmas to direct madrigal performances. Both new groups performed for the school as well as at social gatherings and nearby grade schools.

Contests Challenge Students

What comes to mind when the words "Thomas Carr Howe" are heard? Probably friends, the good times at football games and sock hops, things like that. But Howe is more than just that. It's getting up each morning, going to classes and studying too. Students have varied needs and there are many classes to accommodate these different needs. They range from needle art to dramatics to calculus. Students rarely have a hard time finding at least one class they can enjoy.

However, even with a wide variety of subjects to choose from, everybody becomes bored with school sometimes. This is where class-related activities help out. Contests, for one, add a challenge to studying. Students not only turn out quality work for a grade but win personal satisfaction by competing with students from other schools. Student competition is always high at Howe as students win local, state, and national recognition in the different departments. In past years students have won national recognition in the Scholastic Art Contest and High School Architectural Competition. This past year students have again honored Howe by winning in the NCTE Writing Awards. Aiming for that special goal brings out the best of Thomas Carr Howe.

Work-Study Breaks Routine

Many elective courses at Howe this year gave students a break in the regular routine of class learning. Vocational programs such as ICT and Health Occupations helped students to see early just what work on the job involves. Most programs worked on a half-and-half basis. Half the time was spent in the classroom and half was spent out on the job. While on the job, students gained not only good experience, business knowledge and school credits but in some cases money for their pockets as well.

ROTC: Discipline, Dedication

What is JROTC? The Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps. Yes, but most people aren't aware of its actual function. You've seen the green uniforms every Thursday and if you happen to stay after school or come in on Saturday for some sort of activity, you might notice the drill team practicing in the lobby. But you still might not realize the actual purpose of JROTC. If you were to investigate more deeply, you would find that JROTC is simply another form of education using a military approach. Being taught in a disciplined manner prepares the JROTC student for life outside the halls of Howe and a possible career in the armed services.

The students involved in the extra-curricular side of JROTC develop a sense of belonging and dedication surpassing that of the normal student. Examples of this dedication would include marching in freezing weather on Veterans Day and spending hours after school and on Saturdays perfecting drills and other routines. Results of that work this year included a third place in city competition for the rifle team and the professional-looking color guard presentations. It is the students involved in these activities that attain the greatest benefits from JROTC.

STUDENT LIFE

"I get the feeling of belonging to a group and helping to build up school spirit. Clubs and other outside activities help build up school spirit."

5

Council Growing Together

"Growing Together" was a major goal of the student council. Members spent the summer planning upcoming events and attending leadership conferences. Because student council was an inexperienced group, few major changes but many small ones took place. A combination of old and new ideas pressed the council in motion as they made progress towards open communication and equal representation of the student body. New twists were added to traditional activities such as homecoming, and there was a successful revival of sock hops and formal dances. Christmasgrams added a light touch to the student council's busy holiday season.

With cooperation and spirit at their highest, the student council hosted the state student council convention in October. The convention was the major event of the year. The student body, community, PTA, and many other people made this effort a successful one. Over 650 student representatives and sponsors attended the event with the housing and workshops being provided by the Howe community. This activity was the ultimate in "Growing Together" experiences for the student council.

Activities Begin Early

This year's homecoming was a bundle of activities beginning weeks before the game. Clubs and classes planned and built floats. FEA (Future Educators in Action) made their first stab at the competition. The three days preceding homecoming brought Howeites dressed in brown and gold, crazy socks or their favorite pair of overalls. New activities like the pep rally and bonfire held on Thursday night added excitement to the more traditional activities. The parade continued for its second year with the Hornet Honeys and band leading the floats and homecoming candidates. Frank Tout crowned Krista Shepard as homecoming queen, and after the game student council president Barbara Rouse crowned Matt Langenbacher as Howe's first homecoming king in years. The coordinating efforts of student council gave Howe students, staff and alumni a memorable homecoming.

Girls Promote Sports

People often wonder who the Mat Maids and GyMates really are. Both were created to promote enthusiasm and interest in the wrestling and gymnastic programs. Besides cheering on the teams, girls performed such tasks as keeping score, making hall posters, and decorating athletes' lockers. Mat Maids spent several days helping Howe host the city and sectional wrestling tournaments. For both groups there was a lot of time-consuming work.

Despite the formation of GyMates and Mat Maids, the cheerleaders carried on the difficult task of promoting enthusiasm all year round. Many hours were spent practicing throughout the summer and cheering to the end during October rains. The disappointment of not stirring the crowd with a formal cheer and the responsibility of being at all games sometimes led to frustration. Nevertheless, the response from others compensated for hard work.

IM's: Fun, Friends

Students together, competing in organized sports with friends is what Howe intramurals are all about. Three sports were offered this year—girls basketball, boys basketball, and bowling. Girls basketball was dropped because of lack of interest. The entire program was held up because of bad weather, and some of the games were cancelled.

Of the reasons for playing intramurals, the major one was expressed by Joey Cornett when he said, "to be with a lot of my friends." Other reasons included, "I like it and it doesn't require all of my time" (Sherri Jerrell) and "for the simple reason of having good competitive teams" (Chris Wheatley).

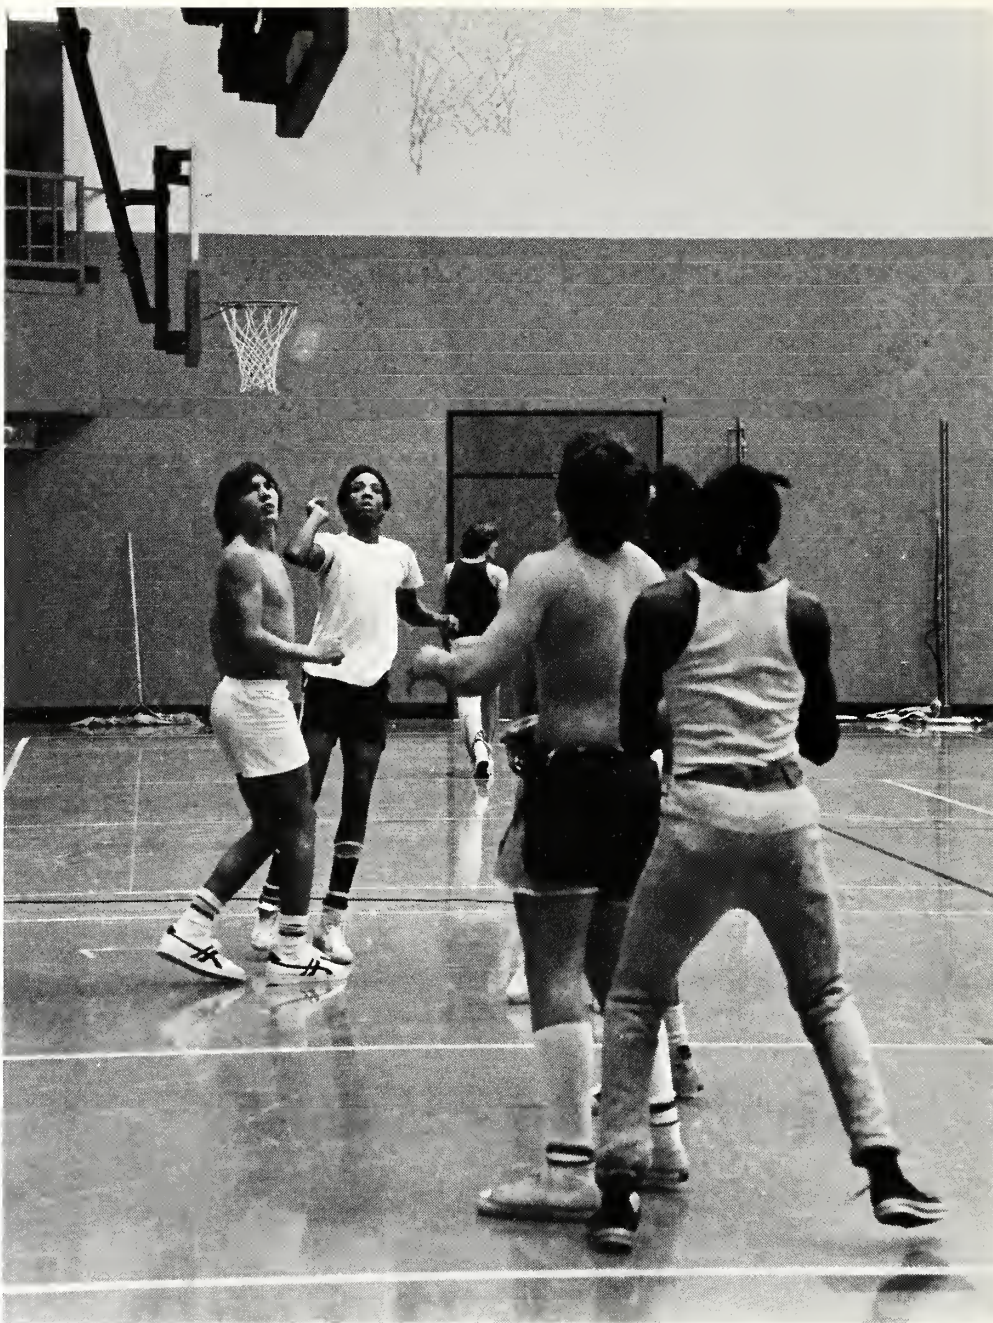

Forms of satisfaction from playing ranged from "it helps me keep in shape" (Chuck Huffman) to "it keeps me out of trouble" (David Taylor) to "playing in an organized situation" (Rob Thompson). The satisfaction of making new friends seemed to outweigh all others. "You meet a lot more of the students that way" (Debra Lewis).

The biggest problem faced this year was also the oldest—the problem of security at intramural basketball with its large numbers. Several students suggested requiring ID cards to keep outsiders away. Many suggested that having regular referees for basketball games would also help.

Despite the few complaints, the most common response was Kim Calhoun's: "It's a lot of fun!"

German Club Hosts State

German Club activities continued during the summer as some club members attended the national convention in Missouri and others toured nine European countries with sponsor Maurice Kindle. The club's first fall activity, an Oktoberfest, proved to be the most exciting in the club's three years of existence. Mr. Kindle tore a ligament in his knee while filling in for a missing dance group member and was rushed to the hospital. Despite his absence the students continued their jobs of serving food and cleaning up trash. Later on students were rescued by Frank Tout and Rick Hewitt, and Bruce Beck drove the bus back to Howe.

A large amount of time and effort went into organizing and hosting the Indiana Federation of Students of German state convention, led by state president Pat Hawkins. This year's convention was the first to involve an overnight stay, as hundreds of German students came from all over the state for skit, song and dance competition and for workshops on almost everything from polka to German cooking.

Sports were still an important part of club activities. Volleyball was played after meetings and against other clubs. A select team slaughtered the Spanish Club, winning all three games and allowing only two points. Because of the amount of time needed for planning this year's state convention, hosted by Howe for the first time, no plans were made to continue the traditional spring soccer program. Other fun activities included costume affairs—Faschingstanz and Faschings Partei. Club members enjoyed eating, dancing and meeting people from other German Clubs.

Clubs Interest Many

Clubs play an important role in Howe's many activities. Most are related in some way to a scholastic subject. Clubs provide people with similar interests enjoyable and exciting activities such as trips to museums, parks, and foreign restaurants. The Travel-Study Club even journeyed to Michigan for snow skiing in late December and returned safely with the exception of one broken ankle.

Tower Involves Many

In the thirty-eight years of the TOWER's existence, its staff has strived to cover all facets of life at Howe. Staffers gain much satisfaction and experience from producing a newspaper. As Tami Engle, editor-in-chief, said, "I get the satisfaction of knowing that I have done my best to inform, entertain, convince, and persuade the students of Howe."

Involvement is a necessary factor in the paper's production. With the type being set at Shortridge and the printing being done by Howe students, the paper is a shared responsibility of many people. The staff's involvement with the paper and their presentation of all aspects of Howe life won them the 1977 International Honor Award from Quill and Scroll.

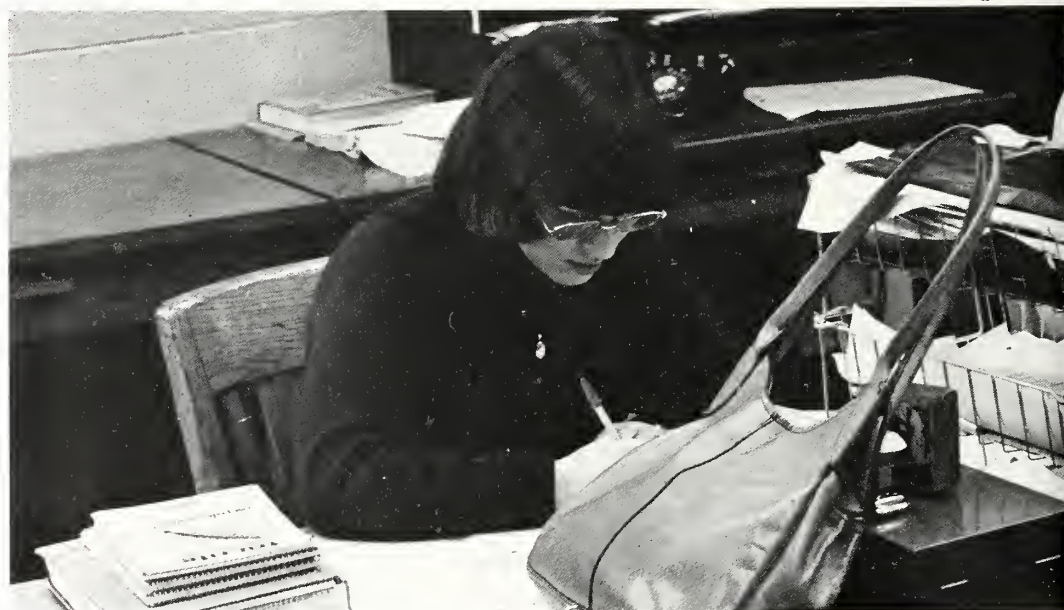

Printing problems and bad weather kept some issues from being printed. Deadlines were frequent as issues were run back-to-back. Even under pressure, morale was high and time was always set aside to relax and have fun.

Mixed Year for Hilltopper

This was a frustrating year for the HILLTOPPER staff. The year started off well with a talented staff of adequate size and many plans to make major changes in yearbook production, but scheduling problems left many experienced staffers without a HILLTOPPER period. Inexperienced staffers were forced to learn their jobs quickly under pressure. Many of our best staff members were lost because of personal problems and lack of time. The January blizzard caused us to miss our first printer's deadline in several years.

Fitting type is one of the major problems in yearbook production. This year we acquired a new type composer which gave us control over type fit, accuracy, and layout design. We also pasted up our own type to have more freedom in our layouts. Several staff members learned important job skills, and we were able to keep yearbook costs down in spite of inflation. Much of our saving was put back into the book in the form of additional pages and increased use of color.

Saturday work and late evening hours spent on HILLTOPPER production sometimes dulled the atmosphere in room 240, but the drive to succeed and the ability to laugh under pressure pulled most of us through the frustrations.

HILLTOPPER staff)

Murder On Center Stage

This year's senior play, "Murder On Center Stage," was a three-act murder mystery. The nine-member cast and various crew members worked long hours after school and on weekends for the November 12 performance. But the most rewarding part of the play was the closeness that developed among everyone involved. It gave us a chance to get better acquainted.

Many of the incidents that drew us closer are amusing to look back on; for example, during rehearsal one of the most important props went sliding across the stage into the orchestra pit.

The plot of the play relied heavily on lighting and sound. But on the night of dress rehearsal, as if on cue, the auditorium went black with "no one at the lighting panel." During the next hour that it took to restore the lights it was discovered that the blackout was not the fault of the lighting crew but a breakdown of the electrical system within the school.

Being in the senior play added another highlight to our senior year that will help us to remember it for years to come.

(Judy Leach)

1. Terry (Laurie Malmfeldt), Mike (David Brooks), Alice (Kathy Newman), Sharon (Donna Richmond), and David (Craig Boram) tell stories to relieve each other's fear of the darkened stage.

2. Terry (Laurie Malmfeldt), an easily frightened girl, is comforted by Mrs. B's (Judy Leach) words.

3. Mrs. Baker, as director of the play, keeps a critical eye on its performers.

4. Mr. Stanley (Tim Arnold) and Mrs. B (Judy Leach) play out parts from Shakespeare's "Othello."

5. Jessica (Alice Godby) returns to the past as an actress in a soliloquy from "Romeo and Juliet."

6. Mr. Stanley (Tim Arnold) holds Sharon (Donna Richmond) at gunpoint in a move to avenge past wrongs.

7. Tim Arnold and Tami Engle practice a knifing scene during dress rehearsal.

The HILLTOPPER staff would like to thank the following students who gave us extra help at various times throughout the year: Debra Bridgeforth, Mary Ann Chandler, Lisa Cooper, Teresa Denbo, Tami Engle, Michelle Gray, Susan Hildebrand, Judy Leach, Jeffery Nelson, Pam O'Haver, Cindy Osborn, Rose Ramos, Sam Roberts, Barbara Rouse, Rex Russell, Donna Thompson, and Mark Zander. We also thank those persons who completed the surveys which contributed to our copy and to the quotations on our divider pages. Our work could not have been completed without these people. We also thank our own members whose signatures do not appear on individual spreads. They completed the difficult and time-consuming jobs which only a staff member can recognize and appreciate.
